Concept 1

In addition, a common theme between the images in the mood board is the night sky itself. I wanted to incorporate it by making it the background of the textbox. I believe that it blends in well with the darker images while at the same time providing enough contrast so that the text itself pops and is not hard to read.

One of the main themes of the visual novel is the tension between isolation and intimacy. For example, the main narrative thread consists of Dani trying to get Jonah to open up about his suicide plans, feelings surrounding the situation with his mother, and feelings for Dani. I wanted to reflect this tension with the UI. The main textbox does not have any clear boundaries which makes it seem to meld into the background. This makes the dialog feel more open, as if the words that Dani and Jonah exchange escape into the night sky—mimicking the more free and open exchange between the two.

Lucida Sans is a very common font on computers and has been included with Windows since Windows 98. In addition, its large x-height makes it easy for reading for long periods of time. Gill Sans is a humanist font which is very similar to Helvetica. Such as with Lucida Sans, it has been seen in use with multiple pieces of Microsoft software.

The first two images were with the font Lucida Sans. The previous image and these two are with the font Gill Sans. I believe that both fonts help give a sense of nostalgia as both were very popular in the mid-2000's.

Concept 2

I also used the night background in this textbox as well. However where it feels comforting and cohesive with the background in the first concept, it serves as a contrast to the background in this concept. This serves to give the reader another sense of isolation.

I went in the opposite direction with this concept with respect to the first concept. Instead of feeling open and inviting, I made this UI feel closed off and isolated. Instead of an open feeling, I made the textbox feel closed off with respect to the background which mimics how Jonah tries to isolate from Dani and the world with suicide. In addition, I used a rounded exterior for the corners to make the outside feel okay while the inside has sharper corners, reflecting the internal struggles of both Jonah and Dani.
